....Soldiers of Sixty-One....

Tramp, tramp! Listen! from east and west,
From sunlit valley and mountain crest,
The heart of a hero in every breast—
Trusting and proud they come.
God of the conflict guard them well!
O, the shriek of the shivering shell!
But stories and glories the years will tell
Of the soldiers of sixty-one.

For what? For honors that chieftains wear?
For fame's bright laurels were they to bear
The battle fury, the hurt of care;
O, glorious patriot band!
And back from the sixties the answer thrills—
For the tender light on our homeland hills,
For the sweet, glad music of Dixie's rills,
For love and for native land.

For these they marched in the cold and heat;
They forged ahead under rain and sleet
Leaving the print of poor, torn feet
In blood on the bitter snow—
For these they lay under silent skies,
Often with aching and sleepless eyes
That could not close, so loud the cries
Of loved ones in their woe.

Then sometimes, just for a little space
They lay in their blankets, each tired face
Touched to rest by a dream's sweet grace,
And, lo, when the morning broke
For the sake of the message the dream had brought,
With fearful havoc each strong arm wrought,
And fiercely and well was the battle fought
In blood and the battle's smoke.

Honor and love for our chieftains—yes,
Honor and love them none the less,
Grandly they loomed in the battle's stress,
The target of every gun—
Glory and honor to them alway,
But mother of heroes, Dixie, lay
Rich gifts at the feet of the boys in gray—
The soldiers of sixty-one.

The graves of your fallen are scattered far
From sea unto steep and the twilight star—
Seek them and cherish them where they are,
Your peerless, your patriot sons!
Go, mem'ry and love, through the valleys deep
And over the mountains still and steep;
Find them and cover them where they sleep
With chaplets their worth has won.

Wreath ye the lilies, white like snow,
Come with the crimson roses' glow,
Gather the buttercups where they blow
Under the golden sun.
Lay them with infinite love and care,
For every petal a kiss, a prayer;
Heaven yields never a flower too fair
For the soldiers of sixty-one.

Some came home from the battle years,
Safe from the conflict, the blood and tears,
Do them great honor, your patriot peers;
Love them and let them know,
For time is wearing apace, apace,
And each new month finds an empty place
In the ranks of the veterans—by God's grace,
Love them and tell them so.
—Beatrice Stevens.

1,250 FEET OF HOSE PURCHASED

The board of mayor and aldermen, in special session on Monday, authorized the purchase of 1,250 feet of two and one-half-inch hose, which is a recognized standard make and size, being the same size, it is said, used by the larger cities. The purchase includes a full equipment of nozzles, reels, etc., for fighting fire.

Upon arrival this hose will be placed in a convenient place probably on the square, where it may be reached without difficulty in case of fire.

We understand also that at this meeting of the board it was agreed that the water mains should be extended so as to accommodate the citizens west of the square. It developed that members of the board were ignorant of the fact that it was proposed to deny those citizens west of the square water facilities, and some indignation was expressed by members of the board when they learned that it was the purpose to stop the water main at the gin lot, instead of extending it on to Martin McElwrath's. It seems to have been a generally accepted view that all the taxpayers of the town were to be treated alike in the water and light proposition, and no one thought of cutting any one out of water or lights, since all the citizens of the town will bear the tax burden.

Since the above was written the board held a second meeting, at which it was unanimously voted to extend the water mains out as far as Martin McElwrath's residence. As stated above, members of the board agreeing that it should be done.

Gaulden in the being accounted by a bad Dortch and his two when it is said they begun and abusing Gaulden and started toward Gaulden, performing states, with an knife. At this juncture commenced shooting, Mr. five shots, four of which Martin wild, however, and one capital, glancing off at the side and airdom, a slight flesh wound. Joining Pierce and Dortch, and the Dortch boys, it is said, all jumped on Gaulden, whom was thrown or knocked down. Gaulden then called to John Stewart, who was nearby, to pull the men off him, and Stewart pulled Pierce off Gaulden, when the latter dealt Pierce a blow over the forehead with the pistol, which Gaulden still held in his hand, felling Pierce to his knees. Gaulden saw a chance to save himself by running and ran nearly home, followed by his adversaries.

Gaulden received in the melee five severe cuts on the head, one taking the top of the ear off and another long gash down his cheek. Dr. Jones was called from Latham and dressed the wounds of both men.

No arrests have been made, and it is understood the belligerents have agreed not to carry the matter into the courts.

Autos in Collision.

On Sunday afternoon, west of Greenfield two, automobiles enjoyed a head-on collision while turning a sharp curve. A Maxwell car driven by Jim Allen from Fulton was damaged several hundred dollars when it was hit by a Studebaker, driven by a gentleman from Kenton. Mr. Allen, who is agent of the Maxwell, had sold the damaged car to a Fulton gentleman and was out on the initial trip teaching the new purchaser the manipulations of the car when the wreck occurred. We are told that both wheels on one side, the fenders and running board were torn from the Maxwell, while the Studebaker was practically uninjured. None of the occupants were injured. Extraordinary care should be exercised by all drivers of cars, as well as other vehicles, when making these sharp turns in the roads.

of the crop, compared with final, is estimated at 1.3 per cent. This compares with 1.3 per cent, on May 25, 1914. The cotton stands are quite generally reported, much less than the usual replanting having been necessary. This fact is attributed to recent general and somewhat heavy rains. These rains, on the other hand, have retarded cultivation to a certain extent and grass and weeds are getting a start. They are also largely responsible for a lateness of some two weeks in the crop.

Soil preparation is fairly satisfactory, notwithstanding that it was necessarily made hurriedly, owing to the lateness of spring. This lateness of the season has resulted in a more uniform stage of advancement, as planting was confined to a shorter period. In eastern states and other sections where fertilizers are used, the amount of commercial fertilizers has been heavily curtailed, probably to the extent of nearly half of the amount used last year. Furthermore, the quality has been greatly reduced by the absence of potash from its make-up.

Condition and decrease in acreage by states are as follows:

|                   | Condition | Acreage |          |
|-------------------|-----------|---------|----------|

TENNESSEE.
Planting is nearly completed and, as a rule, the crop is up to a good stand. Preparation of soil very good, but recent rains, while aiding germination and insuring good stands, have retarded cultivation and given weeds and grass a good start. Open weather to permit full cultivation is the principal desideration now. Decided reduction in the use of fertilizers.

Painfully Injured.

Mr. A. F. Stafford, Martin's popular miller, was painfully injured on Wednesday, when a huge well derrick fell upon him, pinioning him to the ground. Mr. Stafford was assisting a crew in sinking a well at his farm, north of Martin, when, without warning, the derrick fell, catching him before he could get out of the way. Other members of the crew managed to escape injury. He was rushed to his home in Martin and medical aid summoned. Late Wednesday afternoon it had not been determined whether any bones were broken, as Mr. Stafford was too sore to admit of a critical examination. It is feared he has sustained internal injuries.
